

Manuel Synalovski, AIA, NCARB, LEED AP
Founder of Synalovski Romanik Saye Architects

A successful architect and community leader for 40 years, Manny Synalovski has been instrumental in shaping the architectural landscape from the Florida Keys to urban and suburban centers from Miami to Orlando and Ocala, from the Atlantic seashore to Gulf Coast beaches. With deep societal aspirations, Manny has led his organization to award-winning projects in all genres of architecture working with visionary real estate developers, shakers and movers in public service, academic and religious institutions, and not-for-profit organizations. His work is legendary, having been voted the year's best in architecture and honored with a profusion of professional and community service awards. Synalovski-led projects encompass the buttresses that support societal, cultural, and educational aspirations as well as environmentally sound commercial and governmental constructions designed to meet environmental, climate, and operational needs for maximum efficiency and accessibility, and strongly built residences conceived to protect, delight and embrace a fulfilling lifestyle.

Born in Cuba and raised in Puerto Rico, Manny and his family relocated to Miami in 1981. For as long as he can remember, Manny aspired to the field of architecture. After earning his Bachelor of Architecture degree in 1983, he began his practice and succeeded at opportunities both within South Florida and beyond. Yet underscoring the skills and tools of architecture, Manny is driven by his family's foundational values, following the Hebraic tradition of tikkum olam, "to repair the world," particularly hand-picking projects that propel social action and justice for the underserved and promote goodwill and tolerance.

Manny's professional affiliations and community service roles are legendary. And those who know him best, know Manny as an individual of impeccable character, candor, integrity, and intelligence. A son of many cultures, Manny is an extraordinary communicator — attentive listener, responsive spokesperson, diplomatic negotiator, consensus-seeker, and problem-solver. Manny's gift for relationship building stands him in good stead with clients, government bodies, community leaders, and contractor partnerships.

Manny is deeply committed to numerous community organizations. Nationally, he serves on the board of Young Judaea Global and a master plan committee for Camp Tel Yehudah. Locally, amongst other involvements, he is a past president of Temple B'nai Aviv, a strong supporter of the YMCA of South Florida and the Chabads of Hollywood, East Plantation, and Las Olas.

Manny is married to Lisa Kliegman Synalovski, a life partner since high school, and award-winning general contractor and mother of their two daughters. More recently, he is the proud grandfather of two young children.
