

Miami Herald

HURRICANE

South Florida groups collect money, supplies for Hurricane Milton relief. Here's how you can help

BY LAUREN COSTANTINO

UPDATED OCTOBER 12, 2024 11:04 AM |

In the wake of Hurricane Milton, the state's second major hurricane in two weeks, many people from South Florida might be looking at photos of destruction, reading stories about families who lost their homes and wondering: How can I help?

The Category 3 hurricane barreled across Florida's Gulf Coast on Wednesday evening, leaving parts of Sarasota, Fort Myers and other communities underwater and more than 3 million people without power. Homes and buildings were decimated by a record-setting string of tornadoes across the state.

Florida groups, both secular and religious, are collecting money for relief efforts and sending supplies. Some groups — including the national Islamic organization ICNA Relief USA, which works with agencies such as FEMA — are looking for South Florida volunteers to travel to Tampa to assist with distributing aid and helping clear trees and debris.

Here's a list of local organizations helping with hurricane relief and some ways you can get involved in their efforts.

JEWISH FEDERATION OF BROWARD COUNTY

The network of organizations in Broward said it is “uniquely positioned to respond to crises ... with empathy, urgency and compassion.” The organization said it is absorbing all administrative costs, allowing 100% of the tax-deductible donations to go toward emergency shelter, water, food, medical supplies and other essential resources.

How to help

- Donate here.

