

NOAM WEISSMAN

Executive Vice President of OpenDor Media

Dr. Noam Weissman is Executive Vice President of OpenDor Media, where he spearheads the organization’s educational vision and leads content creation. OpenDor Media educates, entertains and engages a global audience of millions by producing and distributing Jewish and Israel content.

Noam heads a team of producers and educators for the Unpacked brand and Unpacked for Educators division which reaches millions of young Jews each year with articles, videos and social media content. He is also the host of the popular Unpacked podcasts “Unpacking Israeli History” as well as the YouTube channel, Today Unpacked.

Noam completed his doctoral dissertation in Educational Psychology from the University of Southern California, with a focus on curriculum design. His dissertation, entitled “Approaching Israel Education,” argues for a new vision in learning about the modern State of Israel. Prior to joining OpenDor Media, he served as the principal of Shalhevet High School in Los Angeles.

Noam is married to Raizie Erreich and has four children, Eyal, Liana, Nissa and Sarit.
